Test 1 - Museum

You are a student, and the local museum manager sent you this message:
Dear Visitor,
We are planning to improve our local museum and would like to hear your suggestions.
- What new exhibits would you like us to include?
- What facilities or services should we improve?
- What events could we organize to attract more visitors?

Best wishes,
The Museum Manager

Task 1.1

Write a short email to your classmate. Tell them about the message from the museum manager and ask what changes, new exhibits, facilities, or events they think would make the museum better. Write about 50 words.

Task 1.2

Write an email to the the museum manager. Give your suggestions about new exhibits, improved facilities, and events that could make the museum more attractive for visitors. Write 120–150 words.

Part 2

SAMPLE RESPONSE – TEST 1

Task 1.1 - Informal Letter

Hi Aziza,

How are you? I've just seen a message from our local museum manager. They want ideas to improve the museum. I think they should add more interactive exhibits and include modern topics. They could also improve seating and make the place more comfortable. To attract more visitors, they could organize fun events and offer discounts. What do you think?

Take care,
Tommy

Task 1.2 - Formal Letter

Dear Sir or Madam,

I am writing to suggest several improvements for our local museum. I believe these changes could make it more attractive and enjoyable for a wider range of visitors.

One important improvement would be to introduce more interactive exhibits. For example, digital screens, audio guides, and hands-on activities could make visits more engaging, particularly for younger people who prefer modern learning methods.

Another area that could be improved is the overall facilities. Better lighting, comfortable seating areas, and clearer directions would help visitors feel more relaxed and move around the museum more easily.

It would also be beneficial to organize regular events, such as guided tours, special exhibitions, and educational workshops for students and families.

I believe these suggestions would greatly improve the museum.

Yours faithfully,
Tommy Shelby

Nowadays, more and more students are choosing to study abroad instead of staying in their home countries. This trend has become increasingly popular due to a wide range of academic and personal opportunities that are not always available locally. Many young people believe that international education can open more doors for their future careers.

Firstly, studying abroad allows students to receive a higher quality of education in many cases. For example, international universities often provide modern facilities, experienced teachers, and a wider variety of courses. As a result, students can improve their knowledge, develop critical thinking skills, and gain valuable qualifications that are recognized worldwide. This can significantly increase their chances of finding a well-paid job in the future.

Secondly, living in another country helps students become more independent and responsible. They learn how to manage their time, finances, and daily tasks without relying on their families. Moreover, they are exposed to different cultures, languages, and traditions, which broadens their perspective and improves their communication skills. However, studying abroad can also be challenging, as it may be expensive and some students may feel homesick or face language barriers, especially at the beginning.

In conclusion, although there are some difficulties, studying abroad offers great opportunities for both personal and academic growth. Therefore, it is understandable why so many students choose this path nowadays.

SAMPLE RESPONSE – TEST 2

Task 1.1 - Informal Letter

How are you? I visited our favorite cafe today and got a message from them asking for feedback. The service was quite fast, and the staff were friendly. The new meal was good but a bit expensive. I think they should improve prices and menu variety. What do you think?

Lots of love,
Tommy

Task 1.2 - Formal Letter

Dear Sir or Madam,

I am writing to share my feedback about my recent visit to your cafe.

To begin with, the service was quite fast, and I did not have to wait long for my order. Moreover, the staff were polite and answered all my questions with a smile, which created a positive atmosphere.

However, I would like to comment on the new meal. Although it was tasty, it seemed slightly expensive for its portion size. In addition, I suggest adding more options to the menu to attract a wider range of customers.

In conclusion, I was generally satisfied with my visit, but I hope you will consider these suggestions to improve your service further.

Part 2 - Blog Post

Nowadays, it is often said that young people are becoming less interested in culture. This trend can be explained by several important factors, especially changes in lifestyle and technology. As a result, traditional cultural activities are becoming less popular among the younger generation.

Firstly, one major reason is the strong influence of technology. Many young people spend most of their time on social media, video games, and various entertainment platforms. As a result, they pay less attention to traditional culture, such as literature, history, and art. In addition, schools sometimes focus more on exams and academic results than on cultural education, which also reduces students' interest in this area.

Secondly, the fast pace of modern life also plays an important role. Young people are often busy with their studies and part-time jobs, so they have little free time to visit museums, attend theatres, or take part in cultural events. Consequently, this situation can have negative effects on society, as people may gradually lose their cultural identity and traditions. Furthermore, a lack of cultural knowledge can reduce creativity and weaken understanding between different generations.

In conclusion, although modern life offers many distractions, it is important for young people to stay connected to their culture in order to preserve it for the future.

Task 1.1 - Informal Letter

Hi Dilnura,

How are you? I've just heard that James won't come to our next book club meeting. I think we should inform everyone in the group chat. Maybe we could discuss another book or do a group activity instead. It might still be interesting if we prepare well. What do you suggest?

Take care,

Task 1.2 - Formal Letter

Dear Sir or Madam,

I am writing to give some suggestions regarding the upcoming book club meeting.

To begin with, I think it would be best to inform all members through a group message or email so that everyone is aware of James's absence. This would help avoid confusion. In addition, we could plan alternative activities such as discussing a different book, sharing personal opinions, or even organizing a small group debate. This could keep everyone involved and interested.

Furthermore, to make the meeting enjoyable, we could include interactive activities like quizzes or short presentations. As a result, members would stay engaged despite the change.

In conclusion, I believe these ideas could help make the meeting successful. I hope you will consider my suggestions.

Part 2 - Blog Post

Nowadays, fast food has become a common part of everyday life. Many people prefer it because it is quick, convenient, and widely available. However, in my opinion, this is mostly a negative development, especially when considering its effects on health and lifestyle.

On the one hand, there are several reasons why fast food is so popular. Firstly, it saves a lot of time, which is important for people with busy schedules. Instead of cooking at home, they can quickly buy a meal and continue their daily activities. In addition, fast food is usually affordable and easy to find in almost every city, making it a practical choice for many individuals.

On the other hand, fast food has a number of serious disadvantages. Firstly, it is often unhealthy because it contains high levels of fat, sugar, and salt. As a result, it can lead to health problems such as obesity and heart disease. Secondly, people may lose healthy eating habits and start relying too much on processed food. Moreover, eating fast food regularly can negatively affect family life, as families may spend less time cooking and eating together, which reduces communication.

In conclusion, although fast food is convenient and accessible, its negative effects on health and daily life are significant. Therefore, people should try to limit their consumption and choose healthier options whenever possible.

Starting with, I was quite disappointed to hear this news, as I had been looking forward to the trip for a long time. In addition, I had already made personal arrangements, which makes the situation more inconvenient.

Nevertheless, I understand that there may have been valid reasons for this decision. Nevertheless, I would prefer to receive a full refund rather than reschedule the trip. This is because I have already made alternative plans and may not be available at a later date.

Moreover, I hope the company will improve communication in the future to inform customers earlier about such changes.

Part 2 - Blog Post

Nowadays, many people complain that they do not have enough free time. This has become a common problem in modern society due to several reasons, especially changes in lifestyle and daily responsibilities. As a result, people often struggle to find time for rest and personal activities.

Firstly, one major cause is busy work schedules. Many people work long hours or even take extra jobs in order to earn more money. As a result, they have very little time left for relaxation or hobbies. In addition, students often face heavy academic pressure, including homework and exams, which also limits their free time and increases stress levels.

Secondly, the influence of technology also plays an important role. Although it is designed to save time, people often spend hours on social media or smartphones without realizing it. Consequently, this reduces the time available for more meaningful activities. This situation can negatively affect people's well-being, as a lack of free time may lead to stress, tiredness, and even health problems. Moreover, people may spend less time with family and friends, which can weaken relationships.

In conclusion, busy lifestyles and poor time management are the main causes of this issue. Therefore, people should try to balance their work and personal life more effectively in order to improve their overall quality of life.

Task 1.1 - Informal Letter

Hi Shohjahon,

How are you? I've just seen a message from our swimming club about price changes. They're thinking about increasing fees or reducing lesson hours. I think reducing hours is not a good idea. Maybe extra training at a higher price is better. What do you think we should choose?

Take care,

Task 1.2 - Formal Letter

Dear Sir or Madam,

I am writing to share my opinion regarding the planned changes to the pricing system.

To begin with, I understand that increased taxes may require adjustments. However, I believe that increasing the membership fee could discourage some members from continuing.

In addition, reducing lesson hours may negatively affect the quality of training. Members may feel that they are receiving less value for their money.

Therefore, I suggest offering extra training sessions at a higher price. This option would allow members to choose according to their needs while keeping the standard membership affordable.

In conclusion, I believe this solution would be fair and beneficial for both the club and its members. I hope you will consider my suggestion.

@MultiLevelRecord

Part 2 - Blog Post

Nowadays, many sports clubs are increasing their prices, and this has become a common issue in many countries. This trend can be explained by several economic and practical reasons, although it also creates some negative consequences for society.

Firstly, one of the main causes is the rising cost of maintenance and services. For example, sports clubs need to pay for equipment, staff salaries, and utilities such as electricity and water. As a result, they are forced to increase prices in order to cover these expenses. In addition, economic factors, including higher taxes and inflation, also play an important role. Moreover, there is a growing demand for high-quality facilities, as many people expect modern equipment and better services, which require greater investment.

Secondly, this situation can have several negative effects. Firstly, some people may no longer be able to afford membership fees, especially those with lower incomes. As a result, they may stop exercising regularly, which can affect their health. Secondly, it can create inequality in society, where only wealthier individuals have access to sports facilities, while others are excluded.

In conclusion, although price increases may be necessary for sports clubs to maintain quality, they can limit access for many people. Therefore, clubs should try to find a balance between providing good services and keeping their prices affordable.

How are you? I've just got a message from the fitness club. They won't be open 24 hours anymore, and the fee will increase by 15%. I'm a bit disappointed because it's less convenient now. I think I might look for another gym. What are you planning to do?

Take care,

Task 1.2 - Formal Letter

Dear Sir or Madam,

I am writing to express my opinion about the recent changes to the club's working hours and membership fee.

To begin with, I understand that electricity issues may affect operating hours. However, the club not being open 24 hours is inconvenient for members like me who prefer to exercise late in the evening. In addition, the 15% increase in membership fees makes it more difficult to continue using the club regularly. As a student, I have a limited budget, and this change affects my decision.

Therefore, I regret to say that I am considering cancelling my membership. I hope the club will find a solution to improve this situation in the future.

Nowadays, single-use plastic has turned into a serious environmental issue in many parts of the world. Even so, there are several easy and practical ways people can reduce its use in their everyday lives and help protect nature.

To start with, people can switch from plastic bags to reusable ones. For instance, cloth or paper bags can be used while shopping instead of single-use plastic bags. Because of this, less plastic waste is created and fewer items are thrown away after just one use. Another useful step is using reusable bottles and containers. Instead of purchasing drinks in plastic bottles, people can carry their own water bottles. Besides that, food can be kept in glass or metal containers rather than plastic packaging.

What is more, people can try to avoid products with too much plastic packaging. For example, buying fresh food from local markets often helps reduce plastic use compared to supermarkets. Similarly, choosing items with simple or eco-friendly packaging can make a noticeable difference over time. These actions are beneficial for the environment, as they reduce pollution and help keep the planet cleaner for future generations.

In conclusion, reducing single-use plastic is possible if people make small but important changes in their daily habits. Therefore, everyone should take responsibility and make more environmentally friendly choices.

Task 1.1 - Informal Letter

Hi Mirkomil,

How are you? I've just seen a message from our library. They're planning to replace the quiet zone with a gaming area and may add a fee. I don't think it's a good idea because we need a quiet place to study. Maybe they should keep both zones. What do you think?

Take care,
Tommy

Task 1.2 - Formal Letter

Dear Sir or Madam,

I am writing to express my opinion about the planned replacement of the Quiet Zone with a Gaming Zone.

To begin with, this change would negatively affect me because I often use the library as a quiet place to study. Without such a space, it may become difficult to concentrate.

In addition, introducing an extra fee may discourage some students from visiting the library regularly. Many students rely on it as an affordable study environment.

Therefore, I suggest keeping a separate quiet area while introducing the Gaming Zone in another part of the library. This would allow both groups of users to benefit from the facilities.
In conclusion, I believe it is important to maintain a balance between entertainment and study spaces.

I hope you will consider my suggestions.

Part 2 - Blog Post

Nowadays, social media has become a key part of everyday life. While it allows people to communicate easily, many argue that it actually increases feelings of loneliness instead of bringing people closer together.

A main reason for this is that communication on social media is not as natural as real-life interaction. When people send messages, they cannot fully express their emotions or understand others clearly, since body language and tone are missing. Because of this, conversations may feel less real and less satisfying. At the same time, many young people spend too much time online, which reduces the amount of direct contact they have with friends. As a result, they may feel isolated and find it harder to develop strong social skills.

There are several ways to improve this situation. One possible solution is to encourage students to be more active in real life by joining clubs, attending events, or working on group tasks. Another useful step is for schools to create more opportunities where students can communicate face to face and cooperate with others. This can help them build confidence and form closer relationships.

Overall, although social media is a helpful tool, it cannot replace real human connection. For this reason, students should use it wisely and make time for real-life communication.

Take care,
Jasur

Task 1.2 - Formal Letter

Dear Sir or Madam,

I am writing to express my dissatisfaction with my recent visit to your cinema last weekend. Unfortunately, the experience was not as enjoyable as I had expected.

Firstly, the sound quality during the film was very poor, which made it difficult to follow the dialogue. This greatly reduced my overall enjoyment of the movie.

Secondly, the seats were uncomfortable and not suitable for a long film. As a result, I found it difficult to relax during the screening.

Finally, I noticed that the hall was not clean, as there was rubbish left on the floor. I believe this reflects a lack of proper maintenance and hygiene.

I would suggest improving sound systems, seating conditions, and cleaning standards to enhance customer satisfaction.

I hope you will take these concerns seriously.

Part 2 - Blog Post

Nowadays, there is an ongoing debate about whether schools should provide lunch or students should bring their own food from home. In my opinion, schools should provide meals for students.

One important reason is that school lunches can be more balanced and healthy. Schools can plan meals that include all necessary nutrients, which helps students stay active and focused. In contrast, food from home is not always healthy, as some students may bring snacks or fast food.

Another advantage is convenience. Students do not need to worry about preparing food every day. This can save time for both students and parents. Moreover, providing lunch at school ensures that all students have equal access to food. However, some people believe that homemade food is better because it is fresher and suits personal preferences. While this may be true, schools can offer a variety of options to meet different needs.

In conclusion, although both options have benefits, I believe school-provided meals are more practical and beneficial for students.

Task 1.2 - Formal Letter

Dear Sir or Madam,

I am writing to express my opinion about the proposed changes in the cinema club.

To begin with, moving movie time to Tuesday mornings may not be convenient for many members. Most students are busy during weekdays, so attendance may decrease.

In addition, focusing only on Hollywood films could make the club less diverse. Many members enjoy international movies with subtitles because they offer different cultures and perspectives.

Therefore, I suggest keeping the Friday evening schedule or offering flexible viewing times. Moreover, the club should continue showing a mix of both Hollywood and international films to satisfy all members.

In conclusion, I believe these changes should be reconsidered to maintain member interest.

Dear Sir or Madam,

To begin with, cancelling the annual Nature Exhibition is disappointing, as it was one of the most motivating activities for members. It encouraged participation and interest in nature. In addition, organizing an online gallery is a good alternative; however, it may not provide the same experience as a real exhibition. Members might feel less engaged.

Furthermore, the $20 insurance fee for field trips seems reasonable, but it could be difficult for some students to afford. Therefore, I suggest offering discounts or flexible payment options.

In conclusion, I believe the club should try to balance costs while keeping members motivated. I hope you will consider these suggestions.

@MultilevelRecord

Part 2 - Blog Post

Nowadays, many clubs and organizations are moving their activities online due to financial difficulties. This has become a noticeable trend in recent years, as groups try to reduce costs while continuing their work. However, this change brings both advantages and disadvantages.

One of the main reasons for this shift is the lack of funding. Organizing events in real life often requires spending money on venues, equipment, and staff. For this reason, many organizations prefer online activities, which are much more affordable. Another factor is the development of modern technology, which makes it easier to connect people through virtual platforms and organize events without physical space.

On the other hand, this trend can have negative effects on people's motivation and participation. Online events may feel less engaging and exciting compared to face-to-face activities. As a result, people can lose interest more quickly. In addition, some individuals prefer direct communication and may choose not to join virtual events regularly. This can weaken relationships and reduce the sense of community within the group.

In conclusion, although moving activities online helps organizations save money, it can reduce motivation and participation. Therefore, it is better to combine both online and offline activities in order to keep members interested and involved.

SAMPLE RESPONSE – TEST 11

Task 1.1 - Informal Letter

Hi Bekzod,

How are you? I've just heard that the Nature Exhibition has been cancelled. They want to do an online gallery instead and add a $20 fee for trips. I feel disappointed because I was really excited. It may reduce motivation too. What do you think about this?

Take care,
Tommy

Task 1.2 - Formal Letter

Dear Sir or Madam,

I am writing to suggest some ideas for the upcoming school weekend sports event. I believe this event is a great opportunity to encourage students to be more active and involved.

Firstly, I think popular sports such as football, basketball, and volleyball should be included, as they are enjoyed by many students. This would help increase participation and make the event more attractive to a wider group of learners.

Secondly, the facilities should be properly prepared. For example, the playground needs to be cleaned and organized in advance, and enough equipment should be available for all participants to use comfortably.

Finally, to make the event more enjoyable, the school could organize small competitions, offer prizes, and play music during the activities. This would create a lively and positive atmosphere.

I believe these suggestions will make the event more successful.

Yours faithfully,

Nowadays, many clubs and organizations are moving their activities online because of financial difficulties. This trend has both causes and effects.

One main reason is the lack of funding. Organizing real-life events often requires money for venues, equipment, and staff. As a result, many organizations choose online options, which are cheaper. In addition, modern technology makes it easier to connect people through virtual platforms.

However, this change can affect people's motivation. For example, online events may feel less exciting than real-life activities. People may lose interest because there is less interaction and energy.

Moreover, participation can also decrease. Some people prefer face-to-face communication and may not join online events regularly. This can reduce the sense of community.

In conclusion, although moving activities online is more affordable, it may negatively affect motivation and participation. Therefore, organizations should try to combine both online and offline activities to keep members engaged.

Part 2 - Blog Post

Nowadays, there is an ongoing debate about whether students should wear school uniforms. While some people are against this idea, I strongly believe that uniforms are beneficial for students in several important ways and can improve the overall school environment in both academic and social aspects.

One clear advantage is that uniforms help create a sense of equality among students. When everyone wears similar clothes, there is less pressure to follow fashion trends or compete with others based on appearance. As a result, students may feel more comfortable and less judged by their peers. This can also reduce bullying related to clothing and financial differences. Another benefit is that uniforms allow students to focus more on their studies, since they do not need to spend time deciding what to wear each day. This makes their daily routine easier and helps them concentrate better in class.

On the other hand, some people argue that uniforms limit personal expression. Many students want to show their individuality through their clothing and style choices. Although this opinion is understandable, schools can still allow small changes, such as accessories or slight variations, so students can express themselves without breaking the rules. In this way, both discipline and individuality can be balanced.

In conclusion, even though uniforms have some disadvantages, they play an important role in creating a more equal and focused learning environment. Therefore, schools should continue to require them while allowing limited freedom for self-expression.

Hi Kamol,

How are you? I've just heard that our company may move the winter event from the hall to a shopping center. I think it could be more convenient, but maybe less comfortable. They also want to add a form for participants. I'm not sure it's necessary. What do you think?

Take care,
Tommy

Task 1.2 - Formal Letter

Dear Sir or Madam,

I am writing to share my opinion about the planned changes to the winter event.

To begin with, moving the event to a shopping center could be more affordable and accessible for participants. However, it may not provide the same comfortable and organized environment as a hall.

In addition, creating a separate form for participants may help with organization, but it could also make the process more complicated for some people. Therefore, it should be simple and easy to complete.

Furthermore, these changes might affect attendance. While some participants may find the new location convenient, others may prefer the original setting.

In conclusion, I believe careful planning is needed to ensure the event remains enjoyable for everyone.

Part 2 - Blog Post

Nowadays, there is an ongoing debate about whether higher education should be free for everyone. While some people strongly support this idea, others believe it may create certain problems. In my opinion, this issue requires a balanced approach rather than a simple yes or no answer.

On the one hand, free education can provide equal opportunities for all students, regardless of their financial background. For instance, students from low-income families would be able to attend university without worrying about tuition fees. As a result, more young people could achieve their academic goals and improve their future career prospects. Furthermore, a better-educated population can contribute more effectively to society and support economic development in the long term.

On the other hand, some people argue that higher education should not be completely free. Universities need a large amount of funding to maintain buildings, pay staff, and support research activities. If education is entirely free, institutions may face financial difficulties, which could reduce the quality of education. In addition, students might not take their studies seriously if they do not invest financially in their education. For this reason, I believe that education should be partly funded by the government but not fully free.

In conclusion, although free higher education offers clear benefits, a balanced system would be more effective in ensuring both accessibility and quality for students and universities.

Part 2 - Blog Post

Nowadays, social media has become an essential part of everyday life and plays a major role in how people communicate and share information. While some individuals believe it has a harmful effect on society, I partly agree with this opinion, as its impact can be both negative and positive.

On the one hand, social media can create a number of serious problems. One common issue is that people often spend too much time online instead of building real-life relationships. Because of this, they may feel isolated and find it difficult to communicate effectively in face-to-face situations. Another problem is the rapid spread of false or misleading information. Since content can be shared instantly, it is sometimes difficult to check its accuracy, which can lead to confusion and misunderstandings among users.

On the other hand, social media also offers many important benefits. It makes it easier for people to stay in touch with friends and family members, even if they live in different countries. In addition, it provides access to a wide range of useful information, including educational materials, news, and online courses. From my point of view, social media is not entirely negative, and its effects depend largely on how it is used by individuals.

In conclusion, although social media has certain drawbacks, it also brings many advantages. Therefore, it should be used wisely in order to gain the most benefit while avoiding its negative effects.

Part 2 - Blog Post

Nowadays, more and more people are using social media as their main way of communicating with others. This trend has grown rapidly in recent years due to technological development and easy internet access. While it offers several benefits, it also brings certain disadvantages that cannot be ignored.

One major advantage of social media is that it allows people to stay connected very easily. For instance, friends and family members can communicate instantly, even if they live in different countries. This helps people maintain relationships despite long distances. Another benefit is that it is fast and convenient, as users can send messages, photos, or videos in just a few seconds. Because of this, communication has become much more efficient compared to traditional methods such as letters or phone calls.

On the other hand, there are also some drawbacks to this trend. One problem is that communication through social media is often less personal than face-to-face interaction. People cannot fully express their emotions, which may sometimes lead to misunderstandings. In addition, many individuals spend too much time online, which reduces real-life communication with others. Moreover, the overuse of social media can negatively affect mental health, as constant comparison with others may cause stress or low self-esteem.

In conclusion, although social media makes communication easier and faster, it also has several negative effects. Therefore, people should use it carefully and try to balance online communication with real-life interaction.

Part 2 - Blog Post

Nowadays, there is an ongoing debate about whether children should grow up in the countryside or in cities. Both environments offer certain advantages, and the choice often depends on what parents consider more important for their children's development.

On the one hand, the countryside provides a calm and safe environment for children. They have more space to play outdoors, enjoy fresh air, and stay close to nature. This lifestyle is usually less stressful and involves lower levels of pollution compared to cities. As a result, children may develop better physical health and experience a more relaxed childhood. In addition, living in a quiet area can help them feel safer and more connected to their surroundings.

On the other hand, cities offer a wider range of opportunities for education and personal growth. For instance, urban areas often have better schools, libraries, and various extracurricular activities such as sports clubs and language courses. Moreover, children in cities can meet people from different backgrounds, which helps them improve their social skills and become more open-minded. Although city life can sometimes be crowded and stressful, it prepares children for future challenges.

In conclusion, while the countryside offers a peaceful and healthy environment, cities provide more opportunities for development and success. Therefore, I believe growing up in a city is more beneficial for children's future.

Part 2 - Blog Post

Nowadays, plastic pollution has become a serious environmental issue that affects both nature and human life in many ways. Due to the increasing use of plastic products, this problem is growing rapidly and requires immediate attention from individuals and governments.

One major problem is the damage caused to the environment. Large amounts of plastic waste end up in oceans, rivers, and other natural areas, where they harm wildlife. For example, sea animals may mistake plastic for food or become trapped in it, which often leads to injury or death. In addition, plastic takes many years to break down, so it continues to pollute the environment for a long time. Another issue is its negative impact on human health. Plastic materials can release harmful chemicals, which may enter food and water, creating potential health risks. Furthermore, plastic waste makes cities look dirty and unpleasant to live in.

There are several effective solutions to this problem. To begin with, people should reduce their use of single-use plastic by choosing reusable bags, bottles, and containers. Governments can also play an important role by introducing stricter regulations and improving recycling systems. Moreover, raising public awareness is essential, as people need to understand the dangers of plastic pollution and change their daily habits.

In conclusion, plastic pollution causes serious environmental and health problems, but it can be reduced through simple actions and better policies. Therefore, everyone should take responsibility to protect the environment for future generations.

Nowadays, there is an ongoing debate about whether school students should wear uniforms. While some people argue against this idea, I believe that uniforms are beneficial for several important reasons and can improve the overall school environment.

To begin with, uniforms help create a sense of equality among students. When everyone wears the same clothes, there is less pressure to follow fashion trends or compete with others based on appearance. As a result, students may feel more relaxed and confident in school. This can also reduce bullying related to clothing and financial differences. In addition, uniforms help students focus more on their studies, as they do not need to spend time choosing what to wear every day. This makes their daily routine simpler and less stressful.

On the other hand, some people believe that uniforms limit personal expression. Many students want to show their individuality through their clothing and personal style. Although this argument is understandable, schools can still allow small changes, such as accessories or slight variations, so that students can express themselves without breaking the rules. In this way, both discipline and individuality can be balanced.

In conclusion, although uniforms have some disadvantages, they play an important role in creating a more equal and focused learning environment. Therefore, schools should continue to require them while allowing some freedom for self-expression.

Nowadays, people have two main choices when shopping: online stores or physical shops. Both methods are widely used today, and each of them offers certain benefits depending on people's needs and preferences.

On the one hand, online shopping is very convenient, as people can buy products without leaving their homes. It saves time and effort because there is no need to travel or stand in queues. In addition, online platforms usually provide a wide variety of products at different prices, which makes it easier to compare options. On the other hand, physical shops also have important advantages. Customers can see and try products before buying them, which helps them make better decisions. Moreover, direct contact with staff allows them to ask questions and receive immediate assistance.

In my opinion, online shopping is a better option for modern life. This is mainly because it is faster and more practical, especially for busy people. Being able to shop at any time and access a wide range of products makes it more efficient than traditional shopping. Although physical stores are still useful in some situations, they cannot match the flexibility of online shopping.

In conclusion, both online and traditional shopping have their own strengths. However, due to its convenience and variety, online shopping is becoming the preferred choice for many people nowadays.

Task 1.2 - Formal Letter

Dear Sir or Madam,

I am writing to share several suggestions regarding the new volunteer projects. Overall, I strongly support this initiative, as it has great potential to benefit the community.

One important idea would be to focus on projects that support vulnerable groups, such as the elderly and young children. These activities could make a meaningful difference in people's lives and also help volunteers feel more involved and responsible.

Another aspect to consider is how to attract more participants. In order to achieve this, the organization could arrange interactive events like group activities, workshops, or awareness campaigns. Such initiatives would not only make volunteering more engaging but also encourage teamwork among participants.

It would also be useful to provide clear and detailed information about each project. At the same time, offering flexible schedules could allow more people to take part regularly, even if they have busy routines.

Part 2 - Blog Post

Nowadays, technology has become an essential part of everyday life. People use it for communication, education, and entertainment. While some argue that it brings people closer together, others believe it can increase feelings of loneliness. In my view, technology mainly improves communication, although it can have some negative effects if overused.

A clear advantage of technology is the way it connects people across long distances. It is now possible to send messages instantly or make video calls at any time. Because of this, friends and family members can stay in regular contact even if they live in different countries. Technology also makes it easier to share information, exchange ideas, and learn new things, which strengthens relationships and global connections.

At the same time, there are certain drawbacks that should not be ignored. Spending too much time on smartphones or social media can reduce face-to-face communication. As a result, people may become less socially active in real life and feel isolated. In some cases, individuals replace real conversations with online interaction, which is often less meaningful.

Overall, I believe technology is more beneficial than harmful. If people use it in a balanced and responsible way, it can help them stay connected while still maintaining real-life relationships.

In conclusion, although technology may sometimes lead to loneliness, it plays a much greater role in bringing people together in the modern world.

To begin with, I believe the activity should focus on performing music, as it allows members to express themselves and enjoy working together. Group performances, in particular, can create a fun and engaging atmosphere.

In addition, performing helps members build confidence and improve their musical skills. It also encourages teamwork and communication among participants. Furthermore, I would be happy to take part in this activity. I would like to join as a singer or assist in organizing the event. This would give me an opportunity to develop my skills and contribute to the club.

In conclusion, I believe a performance-based activity would be both enjoyable and beneficial for all members.

Yours Faithfully,
Tommy Shelby

Part 2 - Blog Post

Nowadays, movies and television play a powerful role in shaping people's behavior and attitudes. From a young age, individuals are influenced by what they watch, which can affect the way they think, act, and communicate in everyday situations.

One of the most noticeable benefits of films and TV programs is their ability to teach positive values. Many movies promote ideas such as honesty, kindness, and teamwork, which can inspire viewers to behave in a better way. In addition, educational programs provide useful knowledge and practical skills that people can apply in real life. For this reason, media can be a valuable tool for learning and personal development.

Despite these advantages, there are also some negative effects that should be considered. Certain films show violence or unhealthy lifestyles, and this may encourage viewers, especially young people, to copy such behavior. Consequently, this can lead to inappropriate actions or attitudes. Another issue is that spending too much time watching television can reduce physical activity and harm people's health. It may also decrease real-life communication, as individuals prefer watching screens instead of interacting with others.

Taking everything into account, movies and television have both positive and negative influences on behavior. It largely depends on what people choose to watch and how much time they spend on it.

In conclusion, people should be more careful about their viewing habits and try to maintain a healthy balance.

SAMPLE RESPONSE – TEST 22

Task 1.1 - Informal Letter

Hi Dilshod,

How are you? I've just seen a message from a bookstore asking for ideas. I think they should add more modern and educational books. They could also improve seating and organize reading events. It would make the place more interesting. What would you suggest?

Take care,
Tommy

Task 1.2 - Formal Letter

I am writing to offer some suggestions for improving your bookstore and enhancing the overall customer experience.

One possible improvement would be to expand the range of books available. Including modern novels, educational materials, and books for younger readers could attract a wider variety of customers.

Another area to consider is the in-store environment. Creating comfortable seating areas and improving lighting would make the space more inviting and enjoyable for visitors.

It may also be beneficial to organize events such as book clubs, reading sessions, or meetings with authors. These activities could encourage more people to visit regularly and engage with the bookstore.

I believe these changes would increase customer satisfaction.

Yours faithfully,
Tommy Shelby

Part 2 - Blog Post

Nowadays, many children are less interested in reading books. However, both parents and schools can take steps to encourage this important habit.

Firstly, parents play a key role in developing reading habits. For example, they can read books with their children from an early age and create a daily reading routine. As a result, children may see reading as an enjoyable activity rather than a task.

Secondly, schools can make reading more interesting. Teachers can introduce engaging books and organize reading competitions or group discussions. In addition, school libraries should provide a wide variety of books suitable for different age groups. Moreover, reducing screen time is also important. If children spend less time on phones or games, they will have more time to read.

In conclusion, encouraging children to read requires effort from both parents and schools. Therefore, by creating a supportive environment, children can develop a lifelong interest in reading.
